Description: Ludo Ruisch / Bluebits is a free and very easy-to-use board game. It has been optimized to be played in a browser over the Internet in real time. What's in the game? Well, there's a lot in the game. To begin with, we have very nice and colorful drawing, well thought-out location design and very good animation. Last but not least for me, as a gamer who is more used to 3D graphics and 3D actions than to other games of this kind, there were the technical shortcomings of this game, namely the lack of multiplayer support and the fact that you can't control the game with a mouse. This, I think, is the biggest drawback! And as I'm not a fan of the kind that I can not fully enjoy the game and have to play as an arcade shooter or a simulator, of course, it's all, as they say, to the amateur. But for me this is just a huge minus. And I'd really like to know what others think of the game: How it tastes. How does it taste? Well, in general, it's not bad. Passes easily, just a little patience is needed. The game could have added a couple more missions to make it more interesting. And so - all good. I at one time, when I first started, in all seriousness thought that this strategy will last me a lifetime. The game sucked so much that I couldn't tear myself away from it until I finished, then waited for the next update, then started again. Now I don't remember how many times I got through the game from the beginning to the very last point. It makes me nostalgic to think back to the time when I sat in front of the computer and played Starcraft all day long. Not to mention all the other games. And that's not a joke! To be honest

I don't remember a game I haven't played this year. And it all started way back in 2003. That's when I first became familiar with a game like StarCraft. I played it, played it, and then gave it up. A year went by and I decided to play StarCraft again. At the time, I was a fan of Warcraft. So I played StarCraft again. I became very fond of this game and even went to university to major in computer science. And just like in the good old days, I couldn't help but go online. 0946cee1be
