This is the result of a program of work undertaken by CEN to provide a common set of standards for the performance of concrete structures. This post does not match. BEN/EDI/EN. (also known as "BEN/EDI") is a standard developed by CEN for the development of common specifications for the execution of concrete structures. According to the developers, BEN/EDI should provide a uniform approach to the design of concrete structures, as they are commonly used in buildings and on construction sites. It also provides general methods for testing the quality and suitability of concrete structures under various construction conditions. dd2bc28256
